Breve descrição do projeto

Brief description of the project

The Centre of History of Society and Culture (CHSC) is an R&D unit of the Univ. of Coimbra (UC), financed by FCT on a multiannual basis. It was established in 1976 under a different name, which was changed to the current one in 1994. The number of members has varied over the years, from 33 integrated researchers, 54 contributors and 1 researcher without a PhD in 2013, to 43 integrated researchers, 57 contributors and 1 integrated researcher without a PhD, including different nationalities, in 2017. Most researchers are History faculty members of several national and international universities who research different thematic areas and different time frames. The extended diachrony and multiplicity of themes structure CHSC activity. It has a specialized library containing 4706 monographs and 121 periodicals, as well as documental reproductions in microfilm, photographs and digital formats from national and foreign archives. Through the Faculty of Arts and Humanities of the University of Coimbra, members have access to several publishing platforms and information (Jstor, Ebesco, Cairn.Info, OpenEdition...) and to collections of periodicals. Since 2001, it has published an annual journal (RHSC), available on open access, in the IMPACTUM platform of the University of Coimbra Press (<https://impactum.uc.pt/en/revista?id=111164&sec=5>), in the UC repository–General Study, and, since 2016, on DIALNET. During the period under analysis, its activity was structured into four areas of research (three groups and one research area): “Local and Regional Heritages and Identities” (coord. by M. Margarida Neto), which focuses on the study of local history, with particular focus on the Central Region of Portugal; “Crossroads of cultures” (coord. by M. H. Cruz Coelho) which is devoted to historical research on Portugal and its connections to Europe, the empire and the world; “Rethinking the art of the historian” (coord. by F. Catroga), which reflects on Portuguese historiography within an international context and “Study and editing of sources” (coord. by M. J. Azevedo Santos), with the aim of (paleographically, diplomatically, codicologically, sigilographically and historically) studying, producing critical editions and editing and disseminating Portuguese History sources or those related to it. CHSC is governed by a council chaired by the Scientific Coordinator (also responsible for its management), the Scientific Board (formed by all the integrated researchers) and a General Assembly consisting of all the researchers who follow the Rules of Procedure. A Permanent External Board for Scientific Counselling, composed of national and international researchers of merit who are not members of the CHSC, surveys and assesses the research carried out and the financial management. Throughout the five-year period under analysis, the main objectives were the following: to promote historical research in different areas, from the end of the ancient world to contemporaneity, in particular within the field of Portuguese and European history; to promote theoretical reflection upon methodologies, concepts and models of reconstitution of the human past; to develop research projects within the themes of each research group and line of research; to promote scientific cooperation between national and international researchers and institutions, through the organization of joint activities and the formalization of partnerships; to implement a network with national and international universities and R&D units; to make research instruments accessible, namely through the editing of sources; to disseminating the scientific production of its research in society on open access platforms (UC repository–General Study); to support student research, particularly students attending PhD and Post-doctoral courses; to make Portuguese historiography more visible internationally.

O CHSC é uma unidade I&D da área de História da UC, constituída, na sua maioria, por docentes universitários, contando atualmente com 43 investigadores integrados, 57 colaboradores e 1 investigador não doutorado integrado, alguns de origem estrangeira. A partir de 2018, ficará instalado no Arquivo da Universidade de Coimbra (AUC), onde disporá de espaços próprios para a direção, investigadores e biblioteca. No período 2018-2022 mantém-se, em termos de estrutura, o projeto do período anterior, intitulado "O saber histórico na compreensão do passado e na construção do mundo contemporâneo", mas historiograficamente renovado e alargado nas suas áreas de investigação, na sequência das atualizações das problemáticas históricas e do novo enquadramento do CHSC no AUC. O projeto tem por objetivo produzir conhecimento com incidências teórico-práticas, tendo por base o estudo de várias dimensões da História de Portugal, numa perspetiva comparada. Este materializa-se em vários vetores de pesquisa: um 1º orientado para a História Local e Regional; um 2º para temas portugueses com alcance nacional ou europeu, de incidência pluritemática, da história económica à história cultural; um 3º orientado para a investigação da história do império e do colonialismo português, reavaliando o relacionamento (e confrontos) entre Portugal e outros espaços, orientais e atlânticos, os modos como foram integrando e excluindo formas culturais e comunidades específicas na vida do reino e do império, o papel mediador da Igreja. Neste vetor integra-se uma área de abordagem mais específica sobre o episcopado e os seus agentes e estruturas na difusão e conformação do império ultramarino português. Estes 3 níveis de abordagem, da história local à global, passando pela nacional, definem 3 dos principais modelos de convivência das comunidades sociais e políticas da sociedade europeia na sua história. A investigação feita no CHSC inclui também vetores mais restritos: um 4º orientado para a Historiografia, teoria da história e do conhecimento historiográfico, seus protagonistas e das "Escolas" em que estiveram integrados, tendo-se presente que a prática da investigação científica exige que o investigador faça a história da história; um 5º vetor de investigação orienta-se para o estudo, edição e difusão de fontes, de arquivo ou outras, tendo por base material (mas não exclusiva) os valiosos fundos documentais/bibliográficos disponíveis na UC. O alojamento do CHSC no AUC acionou a criação de um 6º vetor de pesquisa, centrado na História da UC, que visa estudar esta importante instituição cultural portuguesa, não apenas enquanto corporação de ensino, com os seus órgãos de governo, a comunidade académica, os saberes e os métodos de ensino ao longo do tempo, mas também nas suas ligações à cidade, ao território nacional, à Europa e ao mundo português, desde a sua criação à atualidade.

10.2 Summary in English for general dissemination purposes

CHSC is an R&D unit in the field of History, at UC, made up mostly of university teachers. It includes 43 integrated researchers, 57 contributors and 1 integrated researcher without a PhD, many of whom are foreign. In 2018, the Unit will be relocated to the Archive of the University of Coimbra (AUC) where it will have specific facilities for its Board, researchers and library. The period from 2018 to 2022 will continue with the project structure of the previous period, entitled "Historical knowledge in the understanding of the past and in the construction of the contemporary world", but historiographic ally renewed and widened to areas of research that result from the updating of historical issues and the new location of CHSC at AUC.

The project has the purpose of creating knowledge with theoretical and practical results, based on the study of several aspects of the History of Portugal, from a comparative perspective. This will result in several research areas: the first oriented towards Local and Regional History, the second concerning multi-thematic Portuguese history with a national/European range, from economic history to cultural history; a third area concerned with research into the history of the empire and Portuguese colonialism, re-evaluating the relationship (and confrontation) between Portugal and other (oriental and Atlantic) spaces; the means through which they integrated and excluded cultural shapes and specific communities in the life of the kingdom and of the empire, and the mediating role of the Church. This area forms part of a more specific area regarding the episcopate and its agents and structures in the dissemination and conforming of the Portuguese Overseas Empire. These three levels of approach, from local to national and global history, define three of the main models involving the coexistence of social and political communities of European society in its history.

Research conducted by CHSC also includes more focused areas: a fourth one related to Historiography, history and historiographical knowledge theory, its protagonists and the "Schools" they formed part of, bearing in mind that the practice of scientific research asks the researcher to make a history of the history. A fifth area of research is targeted at the studying, publishing and dissemination of sources, archive and others, having as a basis (but not exclusively) the valuable documental/bibliographical sources available at UC. The housing of CHSC at the AUC made the creation of a sixth area possible, which is focused on the History of UC, which aims to study this important Portuguese cultural institution, not just as a scholarly body, with its governing organs, academic community, knowledge and teaching methods, but also due to its connection to the city, the country as a whole, to Europe and to the Portuguese world, from its creation to the present day.

10.3 Summary in English for evaluation

CHSC is an R&D unit in the field of History, at UC, made up mostly of university teachers. It brings together 43 integrated researchers, 57 contributors and 1 integrated researcher without a PhD. Many of these researchers are foreign, particularly from Brazil and Spain. In 2018 it will be relocated to the Archive of the University of Coimbra (AUC), where it will have specific facilities for its Board, researchers and library, creating conditions for more fellows and researchers, as well as reinforcing the dynamics of collective work. The period from 2018 to 2022 will maintain the project structure of the previous period, entitled "Historical knowledge in the understanding of the past and in the construction of the contemporary world", but historiographically renewed and widened to areas of research that will result from the of the historical issues and the new milieu of CHSC at AUC.

The project has the aim of creating knowledge with theoretical and practical results, based on the study of several aspects of the History of Portugal from a comparative perspective. This will result in several research areas: the first oriented towards Local and Regional History, the second towards Portuguese multi thematic history, from political and military history, to economic, social and cultural history. A third area will be aimed at research into the history of the empire and Portuguese colonialism, using approaches from global and connected history, re-evaluating the relationship and confrontations between Portugal and other (oriental and Atlantic) spaces, and the means through which they integrated and excluded cultural shapes and specific communities in the life of the kingdom and of the empire, with special focus on the role of Church in the process of disciplining and configuring colonial society. This area forms part of a more specific area regarding the episcopate and its agents and structures in the dissemination and conforming of the Portuguese Overseas Empire. These three levels of approach, from local to national and global history, define three of the main models involving the coexistence of social and political communities of European society in its history.

Research conducted by CHSC also includes more focused areas: a fourth one related to Historiography, history and historiographical knowledge theory, its protagonists and the "Schools" they formed part of, bearing in mind that the practice of scientific research asks the researcher to make a history of the history. A fifth area of research is targeted at the studying, publishing and dissemination of sources, archive and others, having as a basis (but not exclusively) the valuable documental/bibliographical sources available at UC. The housing of CHSC at the AUC made the creation of a sixth area possible, which is focused on the History of UC, which aims to study this important Portuguese cultural institution, not just as a scholarly body, with its governing organs, academic community, knowledge and teaching methods, but also due to its connection to the city, the country as a whole, to Europe and to the Portuguese world, from its creation to the present day. This area of research will scientifically follow the World Heritage aspect of the University – Alta and Sofia - and, in parallel, it may make contents available and accessible to and reusable by both national and international cultural and tourist agents. The suggested research areas are, in turn, overlapped by 4 interwoven notions: diachrony, diversity of scale, comparative history, gender perspective and the use of interdisciplinarity. They intend, therefore, to question this historical phenomenon with multiple conceptual and methodological tools involving extensive and multifaceted (economic, social, political, cultural and religious) approaches. This research area will be facilitated by the several thematic and chronological specialization areas in the field of history of the integrated researchers.

The opening of a broader and more diverse set of research areas will enrich the scientific value of the historic research carried out by the unit, offering, as well, new possibilities for further dissemination and knowledge access for the community. Outside this area, the Unit is aware of the commitment of its integrated members towards advanced training, in the form of seminars, conferences or thesis supervisions; to institutional cooperation and knowledge dissemination, as well as to the effort developed, despite its scarce resources, in the area of internationalization. As an example, in the 2013-2017 period, This effort allowed created new forms of both formal and informal international cooperation, some based on protocols, such as the ones already signed with Brazilian universities and others, that are underway, with European and North-American universities, the basis for research/dissemination of knowledge programmes that involve students and teachers/researchers. Framed in a context of international cooperation, both at a training and research level, the 2018-2022 project will promote several scientific activities with national and foreign institutions, both at an individual and collective level; these will be projects with competitive financing, colloquia, research programmes, workshops, courses, and editions.

3.2. Descrição Técnica

3.2 Technical Description

3.2.1. Revisão da Literatura

3.2.1. Literature Review

4.2 Identification and brief description of up to 5 contributions the R&D Unit considers most important of those provided in period 2013-2017 by Integrated Researchers registered in the current application, independently of the R&D Unit having existed or not

The following contributions are of note, and the fields where they are integrated are highlighted:

1. Organization of the International Congress AHLIST (Association of History, Literature, Science and Technology) 2015, Nov. 19-21, in cooperation with the University of Purdue, main centre for the aforementioned association (USA) (<http://www.ahlist.org/>). The congress debated the theme Consilience and Inclusion: Scientific and Cultural Encounters. The holding of this event in Coimbra was suggested by Leonor Zozaya, a post-doctoral student of CHSC, who made a short reflection on this (<https://dialnet.unirioja.es/servlet/articulo?codigo=5913551>). The congress was attended by more than 80 participants from all over the world, coming from international institutions such as Saint Louis University (Madrid), from the Institute for Mediterranean Studies (Retimno, Crete), the Busan University of Foreign Studies (South Korea), among others. Its importance for UC was recognized by the rectory, which provided full support. The multiplicity of themes, the diversity of training and the fruitful scientific debate led to new partnerships and transnational and interdisciplinary research groups. Besides the reinforcement of internationalization, the promotion of networking and interdisciplinarity, the reception of proposals from junior researchers was also implemented. In this context, we would, among others, highlight the international seminar University Alliance of the New Silk Road – Chinese and Portuguese Historical Relations in the context of the Silk Road, promoted by the University of Guangzhou/China (26 -30 May 2016), in Coimbra, or the cooperation with Brazilian universities and institutions (CNPq; UFU; UFG; UFP) involving considerable participation by PhD and post-doctoral Brazilian students (4 May 2015).
2. The Conference Cycle entitled "The Institutionalization of Modern Science in Portugal: University, Public Works and Museums", coordinated by Professor Ana Cristina Araújo (<http://chsc.uc.pt/eventos-chsc/ciclo-de-conferencias/>). This took place in April and May 2015, as part of the activities of the Doctoral course in Advanced Studies in History of the Faculty of Humanities of UC and in cooperation with CHSC, which included the participation of 4 speakers (F. Taveira da Fonseca, F. J. Bandeira Figueiredo, Carlos H. Martins and João C. Brigola) from different areas and institutions (FLUC, FCTUC, Museum of Science of UC, UEvora). Texts from the conference, along with other studies (by Ana Cristina Araújo, Carlota Simões, António L. Duarte, Gustavo O. Ferreira and Pedro Casaleiro) formed the basis for a book, published by the UC press, in 2017, coordinated by Ana Cristina Araújo and F. Taveira da Fonseca. The work intends to present new data for the understanding the application of a modern scientific paradigm on the statutory framework of the Pombal Reformation of UC in 1772. By doing so, it not only considers the dynamics of the relationship between science and the university on issues relating to teaching methods and contents, but also to the understanding of science and of its fields of application beyond the space in which it was practised and taught. This second approach was the principal one adopted in the work.

3. Cooperation with the research group Investigación del Siglo de Oro (GRISO), from the University of Navarra (Spain), in the co-edition of a special issue of the JHSC (no. 15 of 2015) (<https://digitalis.uc.pt/rhsc>) on the Golden Century/Siglo de Oro, which was coordinated by Ana Cristina Araújo and Ignacio Arellano (University of Navarra). This collection of scientific papers on cultural creation and religious thinking was in reply to concerns about the recovery of the historical sense of the first era of globalization. The Siglo de Oro appeared at a time of confluence and contrast, with the statement of ancient myths and modern values, of a mutation in the vision of us and the others and of great creative splendour, both in literature and in arts. In a singular and genial way Luís de Camões, in Portugal, and Miguel de Cervantes, in Spain, expressed the fire stoking the humanities, and the social magnitude achieved by written culture in the Iberian Peninsula. This initiative reflected the consolidation of knowledge and work networks within the interuniversity field, through the collaboration of various R&D units.

4. The cooperation given by some CHSC integrated members to the 500-year celebration of the King Manuel charters was a milestone in the unit's activities between 2014 and 2016. This cooperation resulted in the organization of colloquia, the presentation of papers in several scientific events, conferences in different cities, and, finally, in editing and studying several charters, which were founding documents of local power. These charters deserve attention from the contemporary local authorities, as memories of the primeval organization of local communities and its social and political structure. Remembered throughout the country, the support provided by CHSC members brought together Jaime R. Gouveia, M. Alegria Marques, M. Helena das Cruz Coelho, M. Teresa Veloso, M. Margarida Neto and Saul A. Gomes. Within the same period, different aspects of the medieval and modern local reality were also presented in studies, presentations in congresses, indicated the constant attention that the topic has received. Besides the research and the creation of scientific knowledge in this field, the integrated members also considered the dissemination of local history within the communities and the edition and dissemination of the major "monuments" of the main political and administrative institutions of Portuguese and European history as well as its transposition and adaptability to the Portuguese empire in Brazil and the Orient.

5. Medieval Portugal – organized by CHSC, took place on 27 and 28 October 2016. This congress had the purpose of paying tribute to Professor M. Helena da Cruz Coelho, retired Professor of the Faculty of Humanities of the UC, and integrated researcher of this R&D unit since its creation. Her historiographical work and scientific career were the starting point for a journey of reflection upon the medieval history in Portugal and Europe. This journey revisited some of the themes researched by her over several decades, such as, local, royal and manorial powers, royal, municipal and episcopal institutions, Diplomats, monarchism, welfare, society, women, everyday life and food. The congress took place in the Faculty of Humanities of UC, and was attended by some of the most prestigious names in Spanish, Argentine and French medieval historiography, along with their student historians, and renowned medievalists from Portuguese universities. This was also an opportunity for debate concerning present tendencies in medieval historiography and for reflection on new and exciting approaches.

4.4 Description of other relevant contributions resulting from the activities in 2013-2017 of Integrated Researchers registered in the current application

The integrated researchers made contributions to CHSC in the following fields:

1. Advanced training, with 99 master dissertations and 19 PhD theses supervised by them. This data can be verified on the final pages of RHSC (<https://impactum.uc.pt/en/revista?id=111164&sec=5>), some of which were granted awards. Under their scientific supervision, 14 post-doctoral and 20 PhD projects were developed (some with scholarships from FCT, CAPES...) and 6 projects/training activities of foreign researchers were carried out (Brazil, Spain and Japan). Further training included support for master and PhD courses (history and other areas, in particular museology, food heritage, cultural municipal policy), either through the organization of scientific events (24 open classes and 80 conferences, colloquia/congresses between 2013-2107), with extensive external cooperation - both national and international (Ariel Guianca/ARG; Arthur Kiron/USA; Moliner Prada/SP; Jacopo Francesco Fala/IT; Francisco Bethencourt/GB; P. Puntoni/BR...). Six of these events were organized by young researchers, some of them international. The contributors also formed part of most of the organizing committees of the colloquia/congresses (<http://chsc.uc.pt/eventos/arquivo/>) and, in some cases, benefited from the volunteer work support of the Fac. of Humanities of the UC.

2. Active presence in the implementation of partnerships and network with universities and research units, both international (Univ. Huangzhou/China; Univ. of Purdue and Pennsylvania/EUA; CRIHAM and LAMOP/France) and national (DHEEAA from the Fac. of Humanities of the UC, UBI, ISCTE-IUL; CEHE; CEHR; CIDEHUS-EU; CHAM-UNL; CIES-IUL; CLLC; CLP; CITCEM...; Portuguese Society of Medieval Studies, Science Museum/UC), some of which were carried out abroad (Sorbonne-Paris1). Participation of its members in projects (PICT 2014-2308; Sapientia, HAR 2012-32790, HAR 2015-64014-C3-3-R, 3H150400, REF HAR2012-32245...) and transnational networks (DIAITA; REPORT(H)A, Proprietas...). The international projection of the scientific production of members of the unit and the creation of partnerships/networks was encouraged by CHSC which helped finance trips to scientific events (despite the scarcity of resources) (José P. Paiva/ARG; M. Helena Coelho/Intern. Commission for the History of Representative and Parliament Instil. (ICHRPI)/Vienna/London...; I. Vaquinhas/Madrid; R. Campos/S. Petersburg; P. Nestle/Alcalá de Henares...) We would also highlight the presence of unit members as assessors for international agencies (ERCEA), in Scientific Committees for national and international journals as well as authors and scientific refereeing.

3. Multiple forms of disseminating knowledge in society through talks (in city halls, libraries, cultural centres, schools, academies and scientific societies, museums...), training courses for teachers, some included in the protocols for educational intervention (Hermes Cooperative), presentations of books and scientific committees for congresses and other events. The significant number of these events reflect the attention that has been given to dissemination of research results outside the academic environment, that is likewise expressed by in the publishing of works and their wide availability in repositories.

4. Promotion of practical activities addressed to both academic and non-academic publics (in Portugal and Brazil), involving the close cooperation of students in the topics concerning writing materials (parchment, waxed planks, rice paper, feathers, inks, etc.) or writing topics, in particular subscription as a form of power, validation and fighting forgery. These hands-on activities were developed in cooperation with Scientific Police Lab. of the Criminal Investigation Police and were included in the European Researchers' Night.

5. Contribution to the cultural life of UC through the submission of approved and financed projects (1 in 2015, 3 in 2016, 3 in 2017 and 3 for 2018).

3.2.2. Objectivos / Plano de Investigação e Métodos

3.2.2. Objectives / Research Plan and Methods

Over the last few years CHSC has continued to support the internationalization of its members, despite the financial recession. These have had an active participation They have actively participated in prestigious research and educational events (conferences, courses...), publications, scientific projects and events in several fields of history undertaken abroad ( <http://chsc.uc.pt/o-chsc/internacionalizacao/>). The relationship with Brazilian historians has been particularly strong over the years. It is our purpose to reinforce internationalization both through our integrated members and the activities of contributors. The former have cooperated in projects and international commissions such as Sapientia: Group of Studies in Middle and Modern Age (BR); State, Nation and Nationalization in Europe and Latin America (1850-1930). A comparative perspective/SP Ref. HAR2015-64419-P; Heloise: European Network on Digital Academic History; "Economia Studii": financing, resources and management of the Portuguese university (13th- 16th centuries) (PTDC/EPHHS/3154/2014); International Commission of Diplomacy/Leipzig; International Commission for the History of Parliaments and Representative Institutions/Vienna; International Committee of Camino de Santiago Experts/SP...); teaching of courses/seminars and keynote speakers in conferences and congresses abroad; joining mobility programmes; preface writers, authors and co-organizers of foreign publications (Isabel Mota and Blythe Alice Raviola/Ed. Carocci-IT); translation of works (José Pedro Paiva, History of the Inquisition/Ed. BRILL); as members of Scientific and Editorial Boards of foreign journals (Brazil, Spain); as organizers or members of Scientific Committees for international congresses; publication of articles in Portuguese and in foreign languages in internationally indexed journals. As for the contributors, the amount of students/fellows from other countries, particularly Brazil, is significant, as well as the partnership activities developed with foreign institutions, some of them already underway such as with Paris/Sorbonne that will take place in Coimbra, on February 2nd, 2018 (Community life and service to community [...], with LAMOP, CRIHAM/FR e CIDEHUS). As far as Brazil is concerned, the protocol terms (already signed) are under consideration for approval by the UC Foreign Affairs Office for institutional partnerships with several universities (U. Presbiteriana Mackenzie/SP, Pontifical Catholic University/SP and Federal University of Uberlândia) for research and knowledge transference projects (Historical and historiographical dialogues between Portugal and Brazil...) besides the already scheduled activities with other universities (Federal University of Porto Alegre, Federal University of Goiânia, Federal University of Goiás, Federal University of Amazonas, Federal University of Rio de Janeiro), which includes the 2nd Luso-Brazilian Congress of Paleography (October 2018). Activities in partnership with other R&D units (national and international) are also expected or planned for the 2018-2022 period (BNL; Centre for Local and Regional History of Penela; Regional Archive of Funchal; National Archive of Rio de Janeiro...): the celebration of the bicentenary of the 1820 revolution (started on October 20, 2017, with the colloquium 1817- Rebellion and Revolution in the United Kingdom of Portugal, Brazil and the Algarve (FHUC) with a multimedia Bibliographic Exhibition on the University of Coimbra Press and Periodicals from the 20s (2018); the Colloquium The Petitioner Movement of the City Halls of the Municipality of Coimbra to the 20s Courts (2019); Iberian-American Congress about Liberalism and Independence (2022); Conference Cycle in Spanish institutions on the Circumnavigation of Fernão de Magalhães (2018 and 2021), in cooperation with APH. Within the projects with or in cooperation with international R&D units, the sessions of the international seminar "State, Nation and Nationalization in Europe and Latin America..." are expected to take place in Coimbra, in September 2019, involving the support of CHSC.

Since most of the integrated members are university teachers, they take part in advanced training, particularly through teaching seminars for the 2nd and 3rd cycles of History or interdisciplinary areas such as Tourism, Leisure, Heritage, Food, Museology, Regional Cultural Politics, European Studies, Special Needs Education, Communication, amongst others, and they are also involved in the joint coordination of international programmes (Brazil). In this context they supervise academic works, an activity that has been growing over the last years. During this period, the close link of CHSC to these individuals, both inside and outside the Faculty of Arts and Humanities at UC (either in the country or abroad), has widened the scope of activities which have led to a range of varied initiatives (open classes, courses, colloquia, stimulus provided to scientific entrepreneurialism and to the publication of articles/reviews in RHSC and in other periodicals...). Some proposals have been organized by students (see 4.4), an activity which has continued with scheduled activities backed by other specialized actions aimed at topics or specific historical periods, such as workshops (Modern Paleography, Judicial Documentation, amongst others), some in cooperation with other institutions and within the context of celebrations such as the course in Paleography "Discovering 600 years of documents of the history of Madeira", in the Regional Archive of Madeira. We foresee the organization of Exhibitions and online catalogues both in Portuguese and English (Rare and Discreet: The First women of UC...), as well as the organization, by PhD students, of interdisciplinary reflection symposia on the means and conditions of their objects of study (sources, methodologies, new issues and research proposals). These activities will be enhanced by the new facilities provided at the UC Archive. CHSC will continue to accept fellows (PhD and/or Post Doctorate) and/or researchers, both national and/or international, to carry out research/work, as well as provide extracurricular training for students who are beginning their scientific careers (for research and/or processing of data). Younger PhDs already play an active role in management and events, including the coordination of RHSC (no. 18). The recruitment of post-doctorates by public job vacancy procedures is planned, under existing legislation (transitional law of Decree- Law 57) (2019-2022).

Aside from disseminating the scientific creation and knowledge developed, the project aims at boosting cultural, social and economic activity at several levels, from the local to the regional, the national and the international. It will located the development strategy of Coimbra, the centre region, the country and, via some of its research aspects, within a more global history. This is the case for the history of the University of Coimbra, an area that establishes connections both within the city of Coimbra and the region and, through its cultural and identity heritage and material legacy, to Europe and the Lusophone countries. This is the case with the research carried out about refugees (the Spanish civil war and, particularly, the second world war) that has a regional and an international scope, if we consider that the "areas of permanent addresses" where they settled are located within the centre of the country. Considering the case of the history of the University of Coimbra, the research generally aims at promoting knowledge about the origins, evolution, scientific contents, and academic life of the University from the Middle Ages to Contemporaneity, its relationship with other cultural and political institutions and its impact on the empire. This area of research will be enhanced by locating CHSC at the AUC, as the latter can provide substantial data on this theme. As a means of dissemination of knowledge, within the framework of our educational offer, the creation of an e-learning course about the History of the UC is planned, with the support of the e-Learning Special Project at UC. The publication of research results not just at a scientifically deeper level, as mentioned previously, but also in works where knowledge may be transmitted to the general community and, in particular, to students from other levels of education; publication of research results both in Portuguese and in English; in the case of the refuge theme, it is an aim of the study to make the information about it available (as well as processed archive documentation) and support the construction of memory paths in the areas where they settled (Caldas da Rainha, Anadia, Figueira da Foz...), to establish a parallel with other European cases.

The work developed by CHSC with the Municipalities will be empowered through the commitment of researchers to organizing conferences and presenting papers within the scope of its celebrations and organizing exhibitions and undertaking studies. This partnership work involves cultural institutions from several municipalities, and other national institutions, particularly the Academies.

Our ongoing commitment, permanently renovated by CHSC researchers and contributors, is to make our research international and to disseminate knowledge at the higher academic level, to network and establish partnerships, enhancing and promoting our database and sources as tools in the construction of historical knowledge, to disseminate knowledge to wider and diverse publics with a view to thereby deepening cultural and educational knowledge of the community as a whole.

11.2 Organization of the R&D Unit for 2018-2022

In 2018, CHSC will be transferred to the building of the University of Coimbra Archive (AUC) (Dispatch No. 220/2017 of the Rector of the UC) where it will be based. It will have the facilities required for its Management, researchers and also for a library, keeping its connection to the Faculty of Arts and Humanities of the University of Coimbra. It will maintain the same organizational structure, which means that its operation depends on a council headed by a Scientific Coordinator (also responsible for the administration), a Scientific Board (composed of the integrated members) and the General Assembly of all the researchers, with its activity (research and management) being assessed by an external Permanent Scientific Advisory Committee. There are currently 43 integrated researchers, 54 contributors and 1 researcher without a PhD making up the unit. The hiring of PhD researchers is expected under existing legislation.

Considering that the potential of the former plan has not terminated, the unit has opted to maintain its structure but include the changes dictated by the experience of the last few years and by the new AUC framework. The central purpose of the project "Historical knowledge in the understanding of the past and in the construction of the contemporary world" consists of studying the multiple dimensions of the History of Portugal, within a compared perspective, creating knowledge with theoretical and practical results, providing skills in three aspects of the social utility of historical knowledge, namely in the field of civic education and citizenship, in social and political action decision taking and, in particular, governability; training of agents in the field of cultural promotion, gastronomic and religious tourism, leisure services, urban rehabilitation and environmental defence programmes. These from the basis of a project that includes several research areas. A first, aimed at Local and Regional History, assumes that knowing the past allows each region and/or local community with a common historical destiny to define its place in an ever more globalized world. Its main objectives are: to deepen the knowledge of those communities, of their heritage values, both material and immaterial, landscape and architecture, and disseminate them; to study economic activities, applicable knowledge and resources for sustainable development projects; to study institutions and means of social cooperation and cohesion of communities; to identify the memories of places more susceptible to generating feelings of belonging. A second targeted at Portuguese themes with a national or European scope bringing together all the research linked to themes with a national or European dimension, or where the approach may depend on that framework, regardless of the areas concerned, economic history and cultural history; or by considering narrow topics, of a biographic, religious or familiar nature, or related to gender history, everyday history or the history of sexuality. A third area concerns research into the important maritime strand of Portuguese History, re-evaluating the relationship (and confrontation) between Portugal and other (Oriental and Atlantic) spaces; the means through which cultural shapes and specific communities were integrated and excluded from the life of the realm and the empire; the mediating role of the Church and of its institutions in this process; and, finally, the successful "historical and geographical complexes", guiding the metamorphosis of a territory in a permanent search for a threatened peninsular political autonomy. This area forms part of the project coordinated by José Pedro Paiva, which was presented to FCT, with competitive financing, entitled "Religion, ecclesiastical administration and justice in the Portuguese Seaborne Empire (1514-1750)", the episcopate and its agents and structures in the dissemination and conforming of the Portuguese overseas empire. It involves 19 researchers from several countries and has External Advisory Board specialists from the École des Hautes Études en Sciences Sociales/FR, Univ. of Oxford/GB, Univ. of Yale/USA, Michigan State University/USA, and the State University of S. Paulo/BR.

These three levels of approach, from local to global history, define three of the main models of the coexistence of social and political communities of European society throughout its history, aiming at analysing them at a moment in which European unification seems to have released the ghosts of its historical regional powers. The CHSC research effort also includes more restricted research areas. With regard to History R&D (4th), Historiography could not be forgotten, analysing as such the practice of scientific research, since this cannot exist if the researcher does not carry out the history of history, and more systematic research into the community of historians and conditions for the production/reception of historical knowledge. It is, however, consensual that there is no historiographical research that does not presuppose theoretical positions towards history.

A fifth area of research involves the study, edition and dissemination of sources, archive and others, as an answer both to the considerable competences afforded by Paleography and Diplomatics to History, and to the to make information available to the general public (either in paper or digitally) and, simultaneously, of providing support for academic work. The valuable documental/bibliographic historical sources (in the Faculty of Humanities and in the UC) form one of its material bases. As a consequence, the accommodation of CHSC in the AUC has resulted in the creation of a sixth research area focused on the History of UC, with the purpose of studying this important Portuguese cultural institution, not just as an educational body, with its governing structure, academic community, knowledge and teaching methods developed throughout the years, but also its connection to its city, to Portugal, to Europe and to the Portuguese world, from its creation to the present day. History, as a form of knowledge about the way past societies operated, cannot step aside from the present world. More so, according to E. Hobsbawm, as the depreciation of the past constitutes one of the darkest phenomenon of the end of the 20th century as a consequence of the settlement of a present continuum ...with no type of relationship with the past. It is urgent to recover the place of History, in its multiple dimensions, in the constant re-evaluation of past societies, to also include reflection about future paths.

8. Justificação do orçamento

8. Budget Rationale

8.1. Justificação dos recursos humanos

8.1. Human resources rationale

The need to hire the Science and Technology Management Research Fellow is justified by the following reasons: The number of scientific events (open classes, seminars, conferences and conference, colloquium and congress cycles, workshops...) promoted by CHSC, as well as a result of a partnership with other institutions, has increased significantly over the last few years, affecting the amount of work related with the organization, support and advisory services to all these activities. These tasks include the following: 1. Preparing the organization, producing promotional material (posters, flyers, certificates, online content and national and international promotion); collecting support and sponsorship; meetings with the companies responsible for graphic services and catering; application reception and management; supervision of volunteer students; support for the secretariat; room booking, preparation and management; organization and distribution of congress binders; photographic record. Aside from the administrative and secretariat tasks affiliated to this R&D unit (mailing and emailing records and processing; organization of all the trips/missions and consequent management with the UC accounting services; computer management). The following tasks are also part of this job position: 1. Editorial coordination of the CHSC journal (RHSC), an annual publication that involves graphic composition and support for text revision; 2. Graphic and image composition of posters and exhibition catalogues; 3. Computer preparation of information to be made available to the public through the CHSC website, and insertion of data; 4. Support for research work carried out within the CHSC (bibliographic and iconographic collection, processing, inventory and automated data processing); 5. Support for hands on activities. Given the reasons presented above, the need for a Science and Technology Management Research Fellow is fully justified as a means to support all the work developed by CHSC and all its ongoing projects.

Justificação Global

Global Budget rationale

Human Resources The research fellowship is kept to support the activities developed by CHSC. Within the CHSC activity plan for the 2018-2022 period we intend to admit a senior graduate technician (with experience in the field of Science and Technology Management). This technician has the function of supporting the activities of the R&D unit and carrying out the suggested activities that will be further explained: the organization of scientific activities, support to partnerships, projects and national and international networks, organization of applications for scientific projects carried out within the scope of CHSC: website updating and creation of dynamic areas, amongst other functions (see 16.2). Missions The plan of activities foresees national and international travel. The amount of travel as well as the amount of money designated for each trip are allocated in three forms: national travel and international travel, inside and outside Europe. National territory – this involves travel expenses and accommodation for one day, and costs involved in conference registration. Europe – this involves travel expenses and accommodation for three days, airfares, and costs involved in conference registration. Outside Europe - - this involves travel expenses and accommodation for five days, airfares, and costs involved in conference registration. Travel expenses in Portugal may be applied to research activities but also for participation in conferences and colloquia. Travelling abroad, besides the purposes applying to Portugal, also cover other purposes: participation in conferences/colloquia and/or projects/national and international network meetings; prospecting for and formalization of partnerships, and cooperation with institutions; promotion and dissemination of CHSC activities. Within the context of international missions, the following are already planned: EUA, Brazil, China and Cape Verde. This item also includes expenses concerning the travel and accommodation of foreign consultants (European and non-European) that are part of the Permanent External Advisory Committee, and expenses with airfares and accommodation (average values) to events and activities organized by the R&D Unit. Acquisition of Goods and Services Considering all expenses, the one that generally supports the activities of the R&D Unit is historically the item that absorbs most financing. It includes the purchase of books, the publication of books and the CHSC journal, producing various materials (posters, catalogues, flyers, etc. and the payment of consultant fees.) Building Adaptation and Facilities The amount established for this item includes the replacement and improvement of office furniture.
