

Parag D. Parobo is an associate professor of History at the D. D. Kosambi School of Social Sciences and Behavioural Studies, Goa University. He holds a PhD in History from Goa University and his research interests are the comparative history of empires with reference to South Asia, focusing on the cultural history of Portuguese colonialism in India. He is the author of India's First Democratic Revolution: Dayanand Bandodkar and the Rise of Bahun in Goa (Delhi: Orient Blackswan, 2015). He has published most recently in the Indian Economic and Social History Review, South Asia: Journal of South Asian Studies, Economic and Political Weekly, South Asia Research, Studies in Indian Politics and Journal of Human Values, that grows out of his interest with a postcolonial project of writing history—searching for the voices and agency of the people at the margins of society.

*

Vishvesh Prabhakar Kandolkar, PhD, is an Associate Professor at the Goa College of Architecture. His research on Goa's architectural history focuses on early modern church design as well as the evolution of Indo-Portuguese aesthetics from the colonial to the postcolonial period. He is the author of the book, Goa's Bom Jesus as Visual Culture: The Basilica's Architecture, Image, History and Identity, published by Routledge (2025). The book chronicles the visual history of the Basilica of Bom Jesus, one of the longest surviving churches from Goa's Portuguese colonial era. Kandolkar's art installation series, This is Not the Basilica!, drew from his research about the Basilica and was exhibited at the Sunaparanta Goa Centre for the Arts in 2021. His writing has appeared in peer-reviewed journals, including Studies in Travel Writing, Journal of the Society of Architectural Historians, Verge: Studies in Global Asias, the Oxford Journal of Hindu Studies, eTropic, the Journal of Human Values, and Economic and Political Weekly.